Meet Catskill Jimmy: Wilderness and extreme sports expert and your guide to all the Catskills has to offer!

James Cruickshank, aka "Catskill Jimmy", is a lifelong wilderness and extreme sporting enthusiast, and has a Catskill family legacy that goes back to the 1870's. His earliest childhood memories are of being on the ski slopes of Bellayre mountain at as young as 3 years old.

Jimmy's love of nature, trees, and the great outdoors earned him degrees in Forestry from Paul Smiths College in upstate New York, and Colorado State University, during which Jimmy's passion for skiing became his main pursuit throughout the best ski areas in the country.

A career out west in logging, forestry, and land management followed, and while surveying land for timber for the nation's largest timber concerns across America, Jimmy's knowledge and expertise in wilderness survival reached expert status.

The Cruickshank Compound in Big Indian, NY

The Cruickshank compound in Big Indian, New York, consists of over 400 acres of pristine wilderness and has long been a destination for sportsmen seeking to hunt, fish, camp, hike, forage, observe wildlife, snowshoe, ski and enjoy the historic landscape of the Catskill Mountains. This is the place that Catskill Jimmy loves the most, the land that he knows best and that is in his blood. Nothing is more exciting for him than sharing the beauty, wonder, and adventures that the land provides to the true nature enthusiast.

In 2000, Catskill Jimmy began hosting visitors from New York City seeking camping and outdoor adventure activities. A patient, supremely knowledgeable instructor, Catskill Jimmy excels at not only introducing beginners and "city dwellers" to nature skills like camping, shooting, building a fire, recognizing woodland wildlife, map reading, and more; he also loves accompanying more advanced sportsmen to the best fly fishing, hunting, hiking, mountain biking, water sport, and skiing spots in the region, because he knows them all.
